Driving turns into a marathon

► Motorists take hours to traverse downtown due to Toronto Marathon, road closures ► City council passed motion last month to move one of city's marathons to spring, from fall ► Some take hours to get around town

It turned downtown streets into an obstacle course and drivers into unwilling contestants in a game of Get Me Out of Here.

For the second time in three weeks a marathon pounded down Yonge Street yesterday, cutting the city in half and causing traffic mayhem. Shortly before 11 a.m. one driver, stalled on Yonge, looked to a police officer for help.

"Take the DVP," the officer suggested.

"I thought the DVP was closed."

Nope. But it will at noon — better get moving. The Don Valley Parkway from the Gardiner to Eglinton Avenue was scheduled to close all day yesterday for pavement resurfacing and markings. Later, the shutdown was limited from noon to 5 p.m.

"It happens every weekend in this city," said driver John Glover. "There's always something." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Pantalone revitalized Exhibition

The Toronto Star takes a closer look at what's said on the campaign trail:

Claim: Joe Pantalone said Exhibition Place, under his leadership, has earned the city $9 million in profit.

Background: During a live Q&A with the Star, a reader asked Pantalone how he planned on raising money "as a city-builder to invest in a greater city."

Pantalone, chair of Exhibition Place's board of governors, responded: "By growing the wealth and the tax base of our city. Growth creates more tax revenue. By investing in Exhibition Place — All-Stream Centre, BMO Field, Liberty Grand — we have turned $9 million in profit for the City of Toronto and its taxpayers. I will do that citywide."

Throughout the campaign, Pantalone and his supporters have repeatedly highlighted the deputy mayor's longtime efforts in turning Exhibition Place around from a languishing resource to a profitable enterprise.

The 78-hectare parkland boasts some of the city's best waterfront real estate, stretching from Strachan Avenue to past Dufferin Street. It also houses several popular attractions, from BMO Field to the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair.

Smell test: Including this year's projected profit of about $1.2 million, Exhibition Place has netted the city about $9 million since 2007, the year BMO Field opened. Could more inspired ideas have raised more? Who knows.

Smitherman, Ford in virtual dead heat

- Toronto mayoral race tightens up
- Ford had a 13-point lead last month

The anti-Rob Ford campaign is swaying Torontonians and reversing Ford's momentum, suggests a new Toronto Star-Citytv poll that shows him heading into the election's final week virtually tied with George Smitherman.

"The criticism of Rob Ford is sticking and it's resonating and at this stage his momentum is negative," said Jodi Shanoff, a senior vice-president of Angus Reid Public Opinion, which conducted the poll.

The survey of 1,001 Torontonians on Thursday and Friday by Angus Reid Public Opinion shows 41 per cent of decided voters supporting Ford, compared to 40 per cent for Smitherman and 16 per cent for Joe Pantalone. Three per cent picked other candidates.

With the civic election on Oct. 25, one in five respondents remained undecided.

The poll's margin of error is plus or minus 3.1 percentage points, 19 times out of 20. That puts the front-runners in a dead heat, with Ford having lost most or all of the 13-point lead he enjoyed one month ago in the previous Star poll.

The Ford juggernaut that saw the Etobicoke councillor surge in polls from spring to September on a vow to "stop the gravy train at city hall" appears to have started rolling backwards.

The poll also found that so-called strategic voting has taken hold, with 21 per cent of Torontonians backing one candidate to ensure another doesn't get elected.

Forty per cent of Smitherman supporters say they are voting strategically. He is encouraging the practice, targeting centre-right supporters of Rocco Rossi until Rossi dropped out last week, and going especially hard after Pantalone's "progressive" following, declaring: "A vote for Joe Pantalone is a vote for Rob Ford."

"The anybody-but-Ford campaign has had some traction and George Smitherman is the beneficiary of that," Shanoff said. And, it appears, Pantalone supporters remain ripe for the picking.

► City spends more on feeding animals at the Toronto Zoo than on feeding the accused, numbers indicate

A lawyer representing the alleged president of the Toronto chapter of the Hells Angels is expected tomorrow to challenge the adequacy of meals served in courthouse holding cells, asking a judge to order that his client be provided with more to eat and drink during his four-month trial, set to begin Oct. 22.

In Toronto, lunch served to inmates at courthouses — most of whom are awaiting trial and presumed innocent — consists of a sandwich, often cheese, and glass of water mixed with artificial flavour crystals.

The Toronto Police Service, which is responsible for the lunches, pays $1.19 per meal.

"My client is presumed innocent and has a right to defend himself against the charges at his trial," Craig Bottomley, a lawyer representing John Neal, said.

"It is impossible for him to do so if all he can focus on is the fact that he is starving."

A Toronto Star investigation found that Toronto courthouses may well be the most nutritionally inadequate in North America.

Toronto police spokesperson Mark Pugash said the lunches represent a balance between meeting the needs of prisoners and making reasonable use of taxpayers' money. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Giver reluctantly becomes receiver

► Woman who donates time and energy to helping people finds many willing to help her in time of need

It's really hard for someone who has always been on the giving side to suddenly be on the receiving side.

That's what's happened to Karen MacDonald, a typical busy suburban mother, active at her local school, church and her Ajax community.

Friends say she can never say no — rushing, for example, to raise money for a teen with cancer, flipping pancakes for a parent-council fundraiser, or helping kids cross safely to school.

But in recent months, MacDonald has been forced to cut back on her volunteer work because she is battling a serious liver disease that may require a transplant at some point.

"I love giving because I have fun giving," said MacDonald. "I'm not a good receiver. I'm uncomfortable with it." The 45-year-old mother handles a bustling household, with daughter Cassandra, 10, and son Joshua, 14, who was born with Down syndrome and epilepsy.

Her husband Tim, 44, commutes to a job in Toronto, which means long days on the road, but MacDonald doesn't complain, saying they are lucky he has steady work.

She has helped children at school who need extra help to boost their reading skills. "I love kids. I love seeing them at the beginning struggling to read, but at the end they're reading and you had a true part in it."

"She sees need. She gets it. She pays attention to people," said Gillian McShane-Shields, pastor of the church's children and family ministry. "It's a rare quality."

For a long time, MacDonald would downplay her illness, trying to do as much as possible.

But MacDonald has now discovered that others are just as keen to help.

"People are so kind," she said. "This has taught us valuable life lessons about friendship."

Deaths on Ontario's roads

It's been a deadly weekend on southern Ontario roads, with at least five people killed in separate crashes.

In one case, a motorcyclist died after colliding with a car on Highway 407 in Markham on Saturday evening. Four people in the car are in hospital with non-life-threatening injuries.

Also, OPP in Oxford County are investigating a crash that killed a Stratford man Saturday. They say a car somehow entered a ditch and rolled over. A male passenger flagged down another driver for help and was taken to hospital with non life-threatening injuries.

As well, a woman is dead after a high-speed collision in Puslinch Township near Guelph Saturday.

Some residents forced out of a downtown apartment building due to a fire may have to wait three months before they are allowed home.

Hundreds of people living at 200 Wellesley St. E. have not been able to return home due to structural damage caused by the fire late last month.

About 60 percent of the north tower tenants should be allowed back into their units in five weeks, while those living on some floors may have to wait up to three months.

Toronto Community Housing says more than 300 units in the building's south tower have been given the all clear for tenants to return.

► Russell Williams, former base commander at CFB Trenton, leaves a Belleville court recently.

Colonel due to plead guilty

► Russell Williams back in court today ► Former commander faces automatic sentence of life in prison

Lurid details of the self-professed double life of Col. Russell Williams are expected to be brought before the public starting today, when the former rising star in the Canadian military is scheduled to plead guilty to murdering two women, sexual assaults and a slew of other criminal charges.

Williams, 47, was the commander of the country's largest military airfield, CFB Trenton, until he was arrested in February and charged in the deaths of Jessica Lloyd, 27, and Cpl. Marie-France Comeau, 38.

The stark contrast between the two images — that of a seemingly "well-adjusted," successful military man and an alleged depraved sexual predator — has drawn intense public attention to the case.

Earlier this month a lawyer for Williams told the court his client would plead guilty to all charges — two counts of first-degree murder, two counts of sexual assault, two of forcible confinement and 82 break-and-enter charges dating back to 2007, some of which involved lingerie. He faces an automatic sentence of life in prison with no possibility of parole for at least 25 years.

'Much to be done' to reform RCMP: Report

An independent "workplace assessment" of the fractious RCMP has found that the tepid pace of reform inside the national police force frustrated some Mounties.

"On a range of reform issues, much has been accomplished, although much remains to be done," former spy chief Reid Morden says in a summary of the assessment process, obtained by The Canadian Press.

Tensions rose in the upper echelons of the Mounties over the summer, with senior members accusing RCMP Commissioner William Elliott of bullying and abusive behaviour.

The Public Safety Department hired Morden, a past director of the Canadian Security Intelligence Service, to interview disgruntled RCMP members at Ottawa headquarters for a report on improving relations.

In his Aug. 25 synopsis prepared for Public Safety deputy minister Bill Baker, Morden notes the RCMP had not even successfully publicized changes that had taken place as part of its sweeping transformation efforts.

"Whatever the actual pace of reform/transformation, the accomplishments are not well known beyond such prominent items as the restoration of an allowance for cadets to train at the RCMP Depot."

Morden says an account of "objectives achieved or changes made" will soon be published. "Unfortunately, it has been over six months in gestation."

The Canadian Press obtained a copy of Morden's four-page synopsis under the Access to Information Act.

Morden interviewed two dozen people, including Elliott, the first civilian to lead the force, and several deputy and assistant commissioners, from Aug. 3 to 11. He spoke with Elliott early in the process and again once other interviews — including those who complained

Changes

1 In an email, the Public Safety Department said the government "will continue to reform and strengthen our national police force, and remains committed to ensuring that the RCMP continues to be a strong, accountable organization."

2 CBC recently reported that Elliott told staff in an email there will be changes "to our senior management team" after Morden found an unhealthy level of tension and concern about the progress of reforms.

about the commissioner's actions — were concluded.

"I felt it was only fair that he be given an opportunity to give his side of any one of these examples," Morden said in an interview.

He also spoke to David Brown, a Toronto lawyer whose 2007 report for the government concluded the RCMP was "horribly broken," and David McAusland, chair of the RCMP reform implementation council, an outside advisory body.

Integration in Germany has 'utterly failed'

▶ Comments fuel debate over how to handle the millions of immigrants ▶ Language and culture are key, Chancellor says

OLIVER LANG/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chancellor Angela Merkel's declaration that Germany's attempts to build a multicultural society had "utterly failed" are feeding a growing debate over how to deal with the millions of foreigners who call the country home.

Merkel told a meeting of young members of her conservative Christian Democratic Union that while immigrants are welcome in Germany, they must learn the language and accept the country's cultural norms — sounding a note heard increasingly across Europe as it battles an economic slump and worries about home-grown terrorism.

▶ Chancellor Angela Merkel

"This multicultural approach, saying that we simply live side by side and live happily with each other has failed. Utterly failed," Merkel said.

Many immigrants speak little or no German, work in low paying jobs or live off of government hand-outs at the same time the country faces an aging population and a shortage of highly skilled workers.

"Germany needs more qualified immigration to maintain its economic advantage and deal with the demographic developments," Volker Beck, a lawmaker with the opposition Greens party said yesterday.

Some argued yesterday that Merkel's comment makes them feel less welcome, and do nothing to encourage integration.

IRAN MEDIA GAG

Push to silence opponents

Iran warned domestic news outlets yesterday that they will be banned if they continue reporting on the country's opposition leaders, delivering the strongest and most public threat to the media in the government's push to silence the pro-reform movement.

Iran has already closed nearly all pro-reform publications and blocked Internet sites in an attempt to deny an outlet to the opposition, whose claims of fraud in last year's presidential election brought tens of thousands of protesters into the streets. The government called its opponents "leaders of the plot," a reference to allegations that the opposition is seeking to topple Iran's ruling system.

Torn between two women, he will marry both

- Pakistani man to wed two women in 24 hours
- Marrying lady he loves and bride his family chose

A 23-year-old Pakistani man plans to marry two women in 24 hours, gaining national attention for his novel solution to a dilemma over wedding the woman he loves or going ahead with the marriage his family arranged.

Pakistani law allows polygamy based on the concept that Islam, the main religion in the country, allows up to four wives. But men who take multiple wives usually do so years apart and must get approval from their first wife prior to a second marriage.

Azhar Haidri initially refused to marry 28-year-old Humaira Qasim because he wanted to wed 21-year-old Rumana Aslam. But the decision threatened to split his family apart since arranged marriages are often customary in Pakistan.

They were ready for bombs but fights were the only thing the RCMP appeared to have to defuse during the 2010 Winter Olympic Games.

Many of the incidents turned out to be nothing, and in the end, the RCMP-led Integrated Security Unit was able to scale back its security efforts from a medium-threat level plan to a low one.

"Today's Research for Tomorrow's Healthcare"

Attn Christians,

October 2010

For the sake of this message and the scriptures, my name is Zion. I have a message for you from God.

God is offering his protection to every nation who sets up Christ's government. It is to operate in conjunction with the present system. This is the kingdom of ten toes revealed to Nebuchadnezzar.

THE MOST HIGH has chosen Toronto, Canada for the birth of this. This will give the people of this world a voice and control over their political and religious leaders in matters of peace and justice.

Christ governments will deal with the petitions of the nations giving everyone, believers and non-believers a voice. We will all work together in the pursuit of peace and justice for all.

God makes just one provision and that is, we must remove all graven images from His churches. This is to include the cross. It is to be outside. Christ is the doorway not the main attraction.

This work must be done in the name of Jesus. God will accept no other. This will effectively separate church and state giving everyone representation.

Instructions on how this can be done can be found at www.thepeacelady.com

I, for one, believe we should accept this offer but I am only one. We must all speak or lose this. God is watching for our answer

Those who accept must put up a white flag outside the church in plain view. It must be adjustable to call us when it is at top mast.

"Many shall run to and fro, knowledge shall increase" Daniel 12:4

"First came that which is natural, then that which is spiritual. God is waiting to deal with our petitions" Psalm 20:5,6

If you do not use the King James Version you will not have the same understanding, and we will work against each other as we have been doing and getting no where.

Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be called the children of God

► KFC's new Double Down sandwich

MEATY MONSTER DEBUTS IN CANADA

It can make even the bravest fast-food fanatic turn chicken — and health experts have their doubts whether Canada really is down with the Double Down.

As what is arguably the world's most infamous sandwich makes its debut north of the border, dietitians and academics hope Canadians give KFC's bunless concoction — two slabs of seasoned fried chicken sandwiching bacon, cheese and secret sauce — a wide berth, lest they get wider themselves.

The Double Down's 540 calories, 30 grams of fat and (ulp) 1,740 milligrams of sodium is likely to leave Canuck consumers doubled over in discomfort more than anything else, said Susan Barr, a professor of food nutrition at the University of B.C. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Miners face joblessness

► Chile's miners return home to poor neighbourhoods, unemployment
► They also face intense media scrutiny as personal lives put on display

Chile's 33 rescued miners got heroes' welcomes, still wearing the sunglasses that make them look like rock stars, as they pushed through swarms of news media eager to broadcast details of their harrowing experience trapped underground.

The next day, they woke up in humble homes to the reality of family strife and possible unemployment.

Most of the miners headed home over the weekend from the hospital where they were taken after being pulled through a narrow, 622-metre deep shaft to the surface Wednesday in a stunning rescue broadcast live around the world.

They are getting substantial offers of money for their story, but made a pact to say little about their 69-day ordeal while negotiating movie and book rights. They even hired an accountant while underground to track and share the proceeds.

"All that will come out later. As a group, we're thinking about putting out a book, and that will tell everything," said Ariel Ticona, whose baby Esperanza — Spanish for hope — was born during his entrapment, when asked for details of his survival.

Interest rate hike likely put on pause

► Analysts suggest it won't be just a one-off pause ► Bank of Canada to make statement tomorrow

It's a busy week shaping up on stock and financial markets as investors look to the Bank of Canada to take a break from hiking interest rates while taking in a slew of earnings from major U.S. corporations and Canadian companies.

Investors start the week feeling reassured after U.S. Federal Reserve chairman Ben Bernanke reiterated that he is ready to do more to stimulate the sluggish economy.

There isn't much doubt that the Bank of Canada is set to take a break Tuesday after raising rates three times during 2010 to one per cent.

U.S. economy

- There is growing certainty that the U.S. Fed is ready to stimulate the economy by buying Treasury bonds, a move known as quantitative easing.
- Stocks have rallied strongly on hopes the Fed would embark on a second round of such stimulus.
- But the greenback has weakened since quantitative easing involves the Fed pumping more money into the U.S. economy by purchasing those government bonds, which tends to lower the value of each U.S. dollar.

U.S. eyes plan to boost online safety

The U.S. government is reviewing an Australian program that will allow Internet service providers to alert customers if their computers are taken over by hackers and could limit online access if people don't fix the problem.

Obama administration officials have been meeting with industry experts to find ways to increase online safety, as they try to strike a balance between securing the Internet and guarding Americans' privacy.

U.S. officials are interested in portions of the plan, slated to go into effect in Australia in December.

Staying safe

The U.S. is looking at ways to help the public and small businesses better protect themselves online.

- Computer owners are often unaware that their machine is linked to a botnet and is being used to shut down targeted websites, distribute malicious code or spread spam.

France's PM vows to stop fuel blockades

► Gas pumps run dry in parts of France ► Advisory issued stating flights must arrive with enough fuel to return home

President Nicolas Sarkozy was holding firm yesterday on his plan to raise France's retirement age to 62 with the government vowing to squelch efforts to block fuel after strikes fanned fears of a shortage.

"The right to strike isn't the right to stop access to a fuel depot. That's an illegal action," Prime Minister Francois Fillon said on the TF1 channel.

Fillon spoke hours after unions vowed to do all they could to get Sarkozy to buckle and withdraw his plan or open up negotiations with them in the from other sectors, including energy, postal workers and private commerce, and for the participation of employees at Eurotunnel, which runs freight and passengers under the English Channel to London. Truckers are expected to join strikes as early as today.

The head of the hard-line CGT union's rail branch accused the government of being "arrogant" and "deaf" for refusing to negotiate.

BOMBARDIER

Two new aircraft introduced

Bombardier is reasserting its status as the world's largest business jet manufacturer with the introduction of two new business aircrafts.

The Montreal-based company says the Global 7000 and the Global 8000 aircraft will combine longer distances with improved fuel efficiency and increased comfort.

Bombardier made the announcement Saturday, ahead of the National Business Aviation Association's convention in Georgia next week.

The new jets mean the company's Global aircraft family will now have four models covering the large, ultra long-range category at a time when Bombardier is trying to fend off competition from American Gulfstream's new G650.

The president of Bombardier Business Aircraft said the two new Global jets will give customers the ability to reach more destinations non-stop.

POSTER BOY FOR WAR ON POSTERING

Urban Compass

CAROLYN MORRIS

James Russell scrapes a poster off a street light post along Queens Quay. If it weren't for the spray bottles, X-Acto knife and scraper, Russell would look just like any other business professional.

He's wearing black dress pants, a collared shirt with the sleeves rolled up and stylish round-framed glasses. A corporate writer, he spends several hours each week taking down posters, covering the blocks between the corner of Bay Street to the Radisson.

"You're showing that there are people in the area who care," he says. Nobody pays him to do it, but since the city isn't enforcing its poster bylaw, he feels someone has to step in.

The city's street furniture plan includes designated kiosks for commercial posters, but until they're in place, the city can't stop companies from putting up posters elsewhere. So the ads get plastered all over street poles, cable and traffic control boxes.

It's these, and not the community posters that Russell takes down. "You're allowed to put up community posters, like 'I lost my cat, I lost my spouse.' But not, 'Come and have 99-cent chicken wings at my pub on King Street.' That's not only illegal, it's impolite."

And while people who put up community posters usually just use scotch tape, or water-soluble glue, commercial posterers often are using wallpaper paste.

"The city's street furniture plan includes designated kiosks for commercial posters..."

Even with his dish soap and water mixture, and his scraping tools, Russell can typically only take off thin strips from the posters.

But sometimes he finds them freshly mounted, and easy to remove. Last winter, Russell followed a man who was putting them up, and he started peeling them off behind him. The man noticed, and came over to ask what he was doing.

"Taking down the posters," he remembers answering. "But I just put them up."

"Well, I'm taking them down."

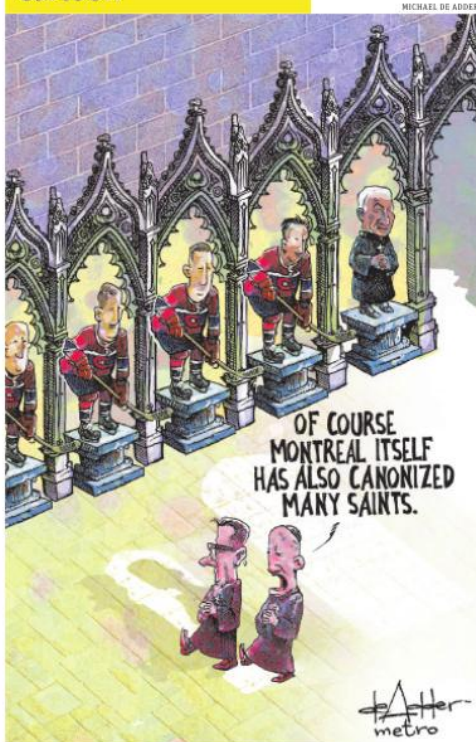

Russell turned around to continue his work when he felt a gush of cold water pour over him. Only, it wasn't water. The angry posterer had drenched him with his bucket of wallpaper paste. Russell filed a police report — which went nowhere — and he lost his new Eddie Bauer jacket. But he kept his resolve.

And he's not alone. There's a growing crew of volunteers from the York Quay Neighbourhood Association who have followed his lead. They set out weekly to counter the endless barrage of commercial poster in their neighbourhood.

Case that killed a career

Worth Mentioning

WASHINGTON. More than nine years after the disappearance of Washington intern Chandra Levy generated headlines around the world, an illegal immigrant from El Salvador accused of killing her is scheduled to stand trial.

Ingmar Guandique goes on trial today for Levy's 2001 killing. However, he's not even a blip on the national consciousness of the case, which dominated news coverage until the Sept. 11, 2001, terror attacks rendered it an afterthought.

The intern's mysterious slaying led to the downfall of former California congressman Gary Condit,

Washington intern Chandra Levy

whose political career imploded after he was romantically linked to Levy and for a time became the No. 1 suspect.

While police no longer believe Condit had anything to do with Levy's death, Condit's spokesman, Bert Fields, said Condit expects to be called as a witness at Guandique's trial, though he has not been subpoenaed. Condit is writing a book about his experience.

Guandique, charged in 2009, escaped scrutiny in large part because of the frenzy around Condit. The former congressman never admitted an affair but said he was friends with Levy, though the intern had told family members the two had a romantic relationship.

Spreading misery to comedy masses

► Canadian comedian Jeremy Hotz finding success with his sad sack stand up ► Writing a new film and developing TV comedy series

Canadian comedian Jeremy Hotz doesn't feel so alone in his misery anymore.

The standup veteran, who's famed for an anguished act in which he complains about life while holding his right hand over half of his face to appear distressed, says gloom is very "in vogue" these days.

"Look around, man. Everybody's miserable," the Ottawa native said in a recent interview to promote the upcoming 10th annual Just for Laughs Canadian tour, in which he's featured as a special guest.

"Ever take the subway in Toronto? Ever have anyone ever make eye contact with you? No! Everyone's miserable: 'Look at the floor, get through your day.'"

The so-called "master of misery" started performing in comedy clubs across the country nearly 20 years ago.

His confused, downer persona just came naturally, he says.

"One day I started putting my hand in front of my face and turning my back to the audience and speaking about really miserable things — three things you should never do if you're trying to get laughs and yet when you combine all of them, somehow it works," said Hotz.

"Ever take the subway in Toronto? Ever have anyone ever make eye contact with you? No! Everyone's miserable: 'Look at the floor, get through your day.'"

JEREMY HOTZ

"Misery loves company, I guess. Who said that, anyway? Probably the most miserable guy in the world."

Hotz is now writing a dark comedy film in which he would star. His co-writer is K.P. Anderson, creator of the TV series The Soup.

He's also developing a half-hour comedy series based on his life with Dakota Pictures, the production company behind comedy shows including Flight of the Conchords and Bored to Death.

TV is in desperate need of comedy to balance out the glut of cop shows, says Hotz.

"There's CSI and then just every city in America, you know ... CSI: Cheek-towaga — everybody dies in a big vat of buffalo wings," he joked.

"Come on! Come up with a different idea. What's the matter with people?"

Awards were a Scream

► Bill Murray appeared as a Ghostbuster when he accepted an award for Best Horror Movie for Zombieland.

► Horror, fantasy awards 'more fun than the Emmys' ► Fans treated to exclusive previews ► Stars come out to honour past and present

There were superheroes and vampires, Ghostbusters, rockers and zombies — and that was just in the audience.

Even more outrageous characters graced the Greek Theater stage at Spike TV's annual Scream Awards on Saturday night — a tribute to horror, sci-fi, comics and fantasy. The fan-fueled awards show/TV special welcomed scores of stars and hundreds of costumed fans.

On a spectacular stage that looked like a warped Metropolis flanked by two gargoyles, Halle Berry, Megan Fox, Don Cheadle, Kelly Osbourne, Mickey Rourke and dozens of other famous faces from some of TV and film's most popular properties treated the crowd to hours of pop-culture indulgence.

Sigourney Weaver emerged from a giant brain-shaped pod to accept "Heroine" honours from James Cameron. Michael J. Fox and Christopher Lloyd got a standing ovation as they reunited with a DeLorean car to celebrate the 25th anniversary of Back to the Future. Jimmy Kimmel honoured the cast of Lost with a special farewell in front of a flaming piece of fuselage.

"This whole thing was a lot more fun than the Emmys," cast member Henry Ian Cusick said after the tribute.

The cast of HBO's True Blood — including Anna Paquin, Stephen Moyer, Alexander Skarsgard, Sam Trammell and creator Alan Ball — appeared together to claim several awards. Kristen Stewart, Nikki Reed and Jackson Rathbone of Twilight joined to accept the prize for best fantasy film, and Bill Murray appeared in full Ghostbusters gear to claim an award for Zombieland.

Not to overlook the writers, Aaron Eckhart presented Ray Bradbury with the Comic-Con Icon award for his dedication to the annual pop culture festival.

Rapper M.I.A., who arrived in a burqa, added a musical touch to the program.

Perhaps hinting at next year's winners were exclusive previews of a new crop of horror and fantasy films. Wes Craven, Neve Campbell, Emma Roberts and David Arquette presented footage from Scream 4. The stars of Paranormal Activity and The Walking Dead also presented never-before-seen clips. Sir Anthony Hopkins introduced a look at The Rite. There was also a peek at the latest Harry Potter film.

But the most anticipated movie, according to Spike viewers, was Green Lantern. Stars Ryan Reynolds and Blake Lively appeared together to accept the night's final prize.

Hollywood goes green

The world's highest-grossing film and one of the most awarded TV shows are also some of the greenest productions around.

Avatar and 30 Rock were among the winners of the 2010 Environmental Media Association awards on Saturday night, which recognized individuals, organizations and productions that help increase public awareness of environmental issues.

The awards were presented at an eco-friendly ceremony at Warner Bros. Studios that featured organic food and compostable dinnerware. Actors Olivia Munn and Jason Ritter hosted the event, which was sponsored by one of Hollywood's favourite green-mobiles, Toyota Prius.

Other productions recognized for spreading a green message were the documentary Gasland and TV shows Bones, Handy Manny, Living With Ed and Lights, Camera, Take Action! Backstage With Disney's Friends for Change.

Entrepreneurs Ted Turner and Jeff Skoll received honorary awards for their environmental contributions. Natalie Portman presented Skoll with his award. His namesake foundation has funded organizations such as The Amazon Conservation Team, the American Council on Renewable Energy and Global Footprint Network.

Turner, who founded CNN, supports wildlife habitat preservation, promotes sustainable energy and furthers other environmental causes through his Turner Foundation. His award was presented by his ex-wife, Jane Fonda.

Rosario Dawson, Lance Bass and Eva Mendes were also among awards presenters.

Turner, who says he's been an environmentalist since he was 10, said that though there is much more to be done to protect the planet, he's buoyed by the ever-increasing awareness of environmental issues in the United States and worldwide.

"Even people who are not conserving, they know about it, and knowing about it is really important, because you can change," said the 71-year-old media mogul.

► Nelly Furtado signs autographs as she arrives for the Canada's Walk of Fame induction gala in Toronto on Saturday.

Canadians rock the Walk

► Eric McCormack says we're too modest
► But Sarah Polley is proud of our humility

Actor Eric McCormack knows it's a little un-Canadian to brag so he apologizes if he acts too excited over his new star on Canada's Walk of Fame.

"Being famous here really means a lot of apologizing, just really being sorry for it, because it's not the (Canadian) way," McCormack joked on Saturday as he walked the red carpet in Toronto.

"It's an unnatural state for a Canadian and I'm really sorry. I'm sorry."

McCormack said it's great that Canadians are finally recognizing homegrown talents and accomplishments, which wasn't always the case.

"Down in the States they'll say, 'When you were a kid did you think you'd be on the Walk of Fame?' and I say, 'When I was a kid there wasn't a Walk of Fame,'" McCormack said.

"This is a very new thing for Canadians, to celebrate themselves."

Hughes was beaming as she arrived on the red carpet and said she was thrilled to not only get a star, but also help applaud others.

"We've always done (great things) but we haven't always celebrated it and I think the Walk of Fame is something that really celebrates Canadians and excellence," she said.

"There's so many great people in this country doing so many fantastic things."

Polley said she too thought it was great to see a celebration of Canadian talent, although it might feel a little odd to some.

"I think it's always complicated for me because on the one hand we're always beating ourselves up for not celebrating ourselves enough. But for me, one of the national characteristics I'm most proud of in this country is humility," Polley said.

"So I sort of feel it's kind of a good sign we don't celebrate ourselves too much ... there's something so great about living in this country because we're not overly proud or overly comfortable with being proud."

"It's finding the balance between acknowledging the great things people have done in this country and also being proud of the fact that we're not the kind of people to boast too much."

Polley and Furtado were the youngest of the inductees — both are turning 32 in the coming months — and Furtado said it was humbling to be recognized while her career is still flourishing.

"It's kind of inspiring because I do feel like I've got a lot of work to do still and more dreams I want to accomplish, whether it's within music or outside of music," she said.

The induction ceremony was to be hosted by comedian Howie Mandel, who got a Walk of Fame star of his own last year.

Mandel said he was glad

Henning was being honoured and recalled being inspired by his charisma and his work as the "consummate entertainer."

"Doug Henning is the man, he is magic," Mandel said.

"He's my first recollection of being aware of any magic, or any illusionists."

"He was certainly an inspiration and a great man and this is so well deserved, I wish he was here to see it."

The gala will be broadcast on Oct. 20 at 9 p.m. ET/PT on Global and Slice. It is to include performances by Jullie Black, Alex Cuba, Burton Cummings, Hawksley Workman and Nikki Yanofsky.

Peter Jackson will direct 3-D 'Hobbit'

It's time to celebrate again in Middle Earth.

Peter Jackson is set to direct The Hobbit, the two-part prequel to the Lord of the Rings trilogy, and will start shooting in February, Warner Bros. said in a release.

The movies, based on J.R.R. Tolkien's books, had been delayed by union issues and the ongoing restructuring of Hollywood studio Metro-Goldwyn-

3-D problems

Earlier this year, Warner Bros. had been criticized for hastily converting Clash of the Titans into 3-D after shooting it using regular cameras.

► Harry Potter delayed The Time Warner Inc. subsidiary even cancelled plans to bring Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 1 to the screen in 3-D on Nov. 19 because it wasn't able to complete the conversion process in time. The final Harry Potter installment will hit theatres in 3-D next July.

Mayer Inc., which owns half the project.

Jackson, who directed the "Rings" trilogy, had originally hired Guillermo del Toro to direct, but del Toro left the project in May because of delays.

"We're looking forward to re-entering this wondrous world with Gandalf and Bilbo," Jackson said in a statement.

The two movies will be shot back to back using digital 3-D cameras. Jackson hinted at the importance of shooting the Hobbit movies in 3-D from the start. "It's an all-immersive journey into a very special place of imagination, beauty and drama," he said.

Jolie denied filming permit in Bosnia

► Wartime story raises concerns among rape victims

► Angelina Jolie calls problems a misunderstanding

Angelina Jolie has questioned Bosnia's decision to withdraw her film permit, saying Friday it was based on false rumours that her movie will be a love story about a Bosniak woman and a Serb man who raped her during the country's war.

But the actress, and two members of her film crew in Sarajevo, declined to say what the plot of her directorial debut will be, and that could make it difficult to allay the concerns of the movie's main opponents: Bosnia's wartime rape victims.

Jolie said in a written statement Friday that it will be a shame if "unfair pressure based on wrong information" prevents her crew from shooting her film in Bosnia.

She offered to meet with wartime rape victims in Bosnia and to clarify misunderstandings that led Sarajevo's culture minister, Gavrilo Grahovac, to deny the permit. "My hope is that people will hold judgment until they have seen the film," Jolie said.

The movie was supposed to be shot partly in Bosnia in November, but Grahovac revoked the permit this week under pressure from the Association of Women, Victims of War, which represents the several thousand mainly Muslim Bosniak women who were raped during Bosnia's 1992-95 war.

Sarajevo Fedja Stukan, who plans to act in the movie, defended Jolie's project, telling Bosnian media that "we are not making a movie about a crazy woman falling in love with her rapist. We are not sick and perverted."

Jolie's Sarajevo producer, Edin Sarkic, told The Associated Press on Friday that the rumour about the rape victim falling in love with a rapist is "insane." But he also said his contract with Jolie prevents him from disclosing details about the script.

Instead, Sarkic said, he resubmitted the movie permit application to Grahovac on Wednesday, along with a full script, and expects the minister to grant a new permit. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

No to Naked, Page

► 'I felt like they could've done better,' Page says of Ladies' new album

Steven Page says he can't see himself ever rejoining the Barenaked Ladies and feels weird that the band didn't change its name after he left almost two years ago.

Page — who co-founded the Toronto group — announced his split from the Ladies in February 2009. Tomorrow he'll release Page One, his first solo album since the break-up.

Asked if he'd get back together with the Barenaked Ladies down the road, he was emphatic.

"No, I wouldn't," he said. "I mean no offence to anybody by this, but although I was sad and so on when we split ... I've never had a day where I thought: 'I wish I was still in the band.'"

"The money was good, but I didn't want to do it for that reason anyway. ... But, like, I never thought: 'Oh, I wish I was in the studio with them,' or 'I wish I was on tour with them.' All those things that they're doing, I'd like to do and it probably won't be on the same level, at least for now. I wouldn't ever be averse to getting together to do a few songs or a show together one time, or something like that, especially if there was a cause we all believed in. That would be great."

"But I'm not looking to be a full-time member again."

The split was initially considered mutual and fairly amicable.

Page even contributed a short statement to the band's website that read, "I love them and wish them all the best in the future."

But things seemed less friendly when the band put out their first album without Page in March. When the first single,

"You Run Away," was released, Page tweeted that the song was a "low blow", Barenaked Ladies singer Ed Robertson has conceded that the song was partly inspired by

Page, but said it's not "totally about him."

Page took umbrage with the song and says that he didn't listen to the rest of the album, just the singles.

OINKER ART

Piggy portrait auctioned

The original 1952 cover art for Charlotte's Web has sold at auction in New York City for more than $155,000 US.

Heritage Auctions says the artwork drawn by Garth Williams fetched more than five times its estimated sale price on Friday and is a record for any of Garth Williams' art.

Heritage spokesman Barry Sandoval says the buyer is a New York collector who wishes to remain anonymous.

Writer's fest attracts big Northern talent

▶ 120 of world's best to appear at International Festival of Authors

JOHN KEILLOR
SCENE@METRONews.CA

This year's International Festival of Authors will include writers who are high up the celebrity food chain: Jonathan Franzen's conflict with Oprah was patched up this year, making him suddenly America's most famous wordsmith.

North of the border, our own Yann Martel has recently received fan mail from Barack Obama. But the U.S. President's appreciation for Martel won't change the way this Canadian author writes, or thinks.

"It's very gratifying, but (Obama's letter) doesn't make any difference to what I do," says Martel, on the phone from Saskatoon. "That's just outside noise. It's clutter that we leave behind when a writer goes to work. A writer going to work enters a quiet room and shuts the door."

Martel also denies that his presence at the IFOA will raise the event's profile.

"This festival is famous already," says Martel, "plus many people go to hear the lesser known writers. That's often the most rewarding part of the IFOA. It's also great to hear poets read live. Poetry can be more aurally gratifying because some prose writers don't compose in chunks that sit as well on their own."

Martel will undoubtedly be one of the hottest tickets at the festival this year.

Martel's fans will no doubt attend the IFOA to hear him read from his latest book, Beatrice and Virgil, for which he was paid the largest cash advance in our nation's literary history.

The book has generated controversy — it's about the Holocaust as seen from the perspective of two stuffed animals — but the debate has only fuelled his fame.

Martel insists that the most gratifying part of being a writer is touching people with his words.

"Whether its seven readers or seven million,"

▶ Author Yann Martel

he says.

"Writing is about creating a personal philosophy, which requires thought and privacy. Fame can take those things away, if you let it.

"Winning the Booker Prize was good for my confidence, but it also made life more complicated," says Martel, who lives in the prairies partly to avoid celebrity culture.

► American Psycho author to trade books for the big screen ► Latest work a somber sequel to first novel

It was supposed to be a love story, a story about a man and a woman, who were together when they were young, finding out that they still have feelings for each other when they meet again as middle-aged adults.

But then something happened in Bret Easton Ellis' life, and the optimism, sensitivity and joy disappeared from the American cult writer's follow-up to his 1985 hit debut Less Than Zero.

Instead, his new novel, Imperial Bedrooms, is about "a ... narcissist with control issues," he boldly says. It stars the protagonist from Less Than Zero, Clay, now 43, who works as a scriptwriter. He returns to his hometown of Los Angeles and enters into a relationship with the young actress Rain Turner — a relationship mainly built on lies, manipulation and reciprocity à la "I'll

Ellis Island

Brush up on your Bret Easton Ellis knowledge.

- 1 Brett Easton Ellis was born Mar. 7, 1964 in Los Angeles.
- 2 Ellis' first book Less Than Zero, was published in 1985.
- 3 He gained both global fame and infamy with his novel American Psycho, published in 1991.
- 4 Several of Ellis' novels have been made into films, including Less Than Zero and American Psycho.

scratch your back if you'll scratch mine."

She'll sleep with him if he makes sure she gets a part in one of his films.

"I was in a good mood after I finished Lunar Park," the author says. "I had gotten rid of a lot of pent-up daddy issues. I wanted a release, a catharsis. Then I got back to LA and the problems with movie The Informers (based on Ellis' 1994 collection of short stories of the same name) started happening right away."

He then reveals something of a rather personal nature: "I had to betray my closest friend at the time and kill him off a movie in order for it to proceed. He had doubts about the director (Gregor Jordan) and the people who put their money into this project."

"I made a couple of phone calls to a lawyer, and it was incredibly stressful and f—ed up but I really wanted to see the movie get made," says the 46-year-old author.

And it did. But maybe his friend was right — today Ellis labels the film "the biggest piece of s—."

Wrestling with the relentless and far-from-glamorous side of the movie industry has not put Ellis off; in fact, it has had quite the opposite effect.

He is determined on leaving the world of novels to become a scriptwriter and, eventually, a film director.

"I'm not really interested in books anymore. I'm not writing one right now. It's like this: the Bret Easton Ellis' project is now complete — 25 years, six novels, and a collection of short stories. I've explored these themes, these kinds of people, this kind of novel enough. It's time to move on," he admits.

► Community actors say improvisation not needed on set when writing is so strong

The stars of Community really have built their own er, um, community. So say stars Joel McHale and Alison Brie.

"If we had the free time, I swear to you, people would be going out to dinner after every day of work just because we actually get along that well," says McHale.

Brie is quick to agree.

"It's funny to me that we have, you know, maybe a day and a half off a week, and a lot of the time we still choose to spend it with each other," she says.

McHale and Brie, who play two-sevenths of a tight-knit study group at a comical community college, are possibly the most overextended actors on the show.

McHale hosts the weekly pop culture-trashing show The Soup on the E! network, and Brie plays the doting, naive housewife Trudy Campbell on AMC's Mad Men.

"I think I apply some of the concepts behind dramatic acting that I use over on Mad Men over here," she says. "In fact, last season I think I was crying more on the set of Community. My character was crying harder than my character was on the drama that I also work on." As if on cue, McHale seizes the present comedic moment.

"I cried more on The Soup than I cried on Community," he says.

► Mad Men creator Matthew Weiner doesn't drop the ball on AMC beast

Although Mad Men's fourth-season finale came to a close last night, its creator, Matthew Weiner, is willing to admit to feeling great.

Mind you, satisfaction is not a routine state of mind for Weiner, despite the acclaim and cultural heat his show enjoys year after year (and despite its landing a couple more Emmys for 2010, including Best Drama for the third straight time). When the current season began in July, Weiner said he was "terrified" by the creative risks that Mad Men had in store for its viewers.

Picking up in November 1964, the show presented its charismatic, tormented hero, Don Draper (played by series star Jon Hamm), as divorced and uprooted from his American Dream

"For whatever reason I think this season really connected with the audience"

MATTHEW WEINER, CREATOR OF AMC'S MAD MEN

suburban home to a somber Greenwich Village flat.

Meanwhile, the startup advertising agency Don had helped found was struggling to keep the lights on. This seemed quite a comedown from Don's high-flying days at the respected Madison Avenue shop where he had prospered before.

And it was quite a risky move for Weiner: to explode both Don's family life and career.

During an interview Saturday, Weiner laughed at being reminded of his anxiousness a few months ago.

"It's how women describe having a baby: I had completely forgotten that," he said on hearing his word 'terrified' repeated back to him. But, indeed, this year he gave birth to what, in many ways, was a newly realized series.

"I saw it as a challenge to myself as well as the audience," he explained. "And it really worked. When you take away that many things from your character, and you're actually able to find story in it — that was very satisfying to me."

"For whatever reason, I think this season really connected with the audience," added Weiner, who clearly doesn't buy the adage, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

Weiner remains tightlipped when asked what might happen on Mad Men when the show returns months from now for season five.

► After your kid reads Jan Thornhill's Who Wants Pizza? Not only will they be want to have a slice, they will also know where the ingredients came from.

Making kids even more interested in some pizza

► Food is often something kids take for granted — it simply shows up every day ► Yet there is so much for kids to know and understand about food, as Jan Thornhill explains in her new book, Who Wants Pizza?

Jan Thornhill uses one of the more common foods kids eat — a slice of pizza — as a jumping off point to take a look a plethora of facts with photos and illustrations to take kids on a journey through the world of food past, present, and future.

Who Wants Pizza? combines tons of interesting facts with photos and illustrations to take kids on a journey through the world of food past, present, and future.

Facts like:

- Humans are very visual animals, and the makers of processed foods know this. That's why colour is so often on lists of ingredients — to make food look more appealing. In one study, test subjects who could see their food ate much more than others who were blindfolded — but the blindfolded ones reported being just as full on less food!

- Different cultures have different food customs. In many places, food is eaten without utensils, and in countries that use chopsticks, it's very rude to point with them. In Russia, to show that your host has been generous, you're expected to always leave a little food on your plate, while in India, it's impolite to leave anything at all.

- World exploration was driven by a search not for gold or even land, but for spices. Spices like black pepper, cloves, and cinnamon were valuable because they lived up a dull European diet and preserved food. Also, spices were fabulously expensive, which of course made them a status symbol. Unfortunately, this hunger for spices came at a cost to many people who grew them. As sea routes to the Far East and the Americas were discovered, one spice-growing nation after another was conquered and then controlled by foreigners.

Comprehensive, engaging, and fun, Who Wants Pizza? is a book that kids will want to digest again and again — and what's better, they are sure to come away hungry and well informed. Who Wants Pizza? is $12.95.

Concerned that your family isn't getting enough fruits and veggies in their diet? Recent research from the Dietitians of Canada showed that almost 25 per cent of Canadians surveyed said they hadn't consumed any fruits or vegetables the previous day.

► Rustic Pork and Veal Pie

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

► The rustic pork and veal pie is hearty and easy to prepare ► A melding of flavours in your mouth ► Also great for re-heating the next day

Whether it's for a Halloween party or Sunday in front of the widescreen for a football game, good food for a fall gathering should be hearty, flavourful and easy to prepare.

With this rustic pork and veal pie, you can put a checkmark next to all three.

For the savoury filling of this free-form meat pie, you start with pre-shredded cabbage, which is sold near the pre-washed salad mixes at your grocer. Then you add convenient ground pork and veal along with canned tomatoes and spices.

After it is simmered to let the flavours meld, the filling gets wrapped up in store-bought, refrigerated pie crusts and baked until golden brown. For added convenience, the pie can be baked a day ahead and reheated in a 180 C (350 F) oven for 30 minutes or until heated through.

Ingredients :

- 10 ml (2 tsp) extra-virgin oil
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 1.5 l (6 cups) shredded green cabbage (1/2 small head)
- 250 g (1/2 lb) ground pork
- 250 g (1/2 lb) ground veal
- 250 ml (1 cup) canned diced tomatoes, with juice
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) tomato paste
- 5 ml (1 tsp) dried thyme leaves
- 1 ml (1/4 tsp) ground allspice
- 1 ml (1/4 tsp) cinnamon
- Salt and ground black pepper, to taste
- 150 ml (2/3 cup) shredded extra-sharp cheddar cheese
- 1 pkg refrigerated pie crusts (two 23-cm/9-inch crusts), room temperature

Preparation:

1 Heat oven to 230 C (450 F). Coat a large baking sheet or pizza pan with cooking spray. Set aside.

2 Heat oil in a large non-stick skillet over medium. Add garlic and saute for 30 seconds. Stir in cabbage and saute until softened and translucent, about 5 minutes.

3 Add ground pork and veal and cook, breaking it up as finely as possible until no longer pink, 8 to 10 minutes. Stir in tomatoes, tomato paste, thyme, allspice and cinnamon. Cover and simmer for 7 minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Uncover, stir in cheese until melted, then set aside to cool slightly.

4 Meanwhile, on a lightly floured surface, place one pie crust on top of the other. Dust top crust with flour and roll crusts out together into a 46-cm (18-inch) circle. Fold circle in half, transfer it to the prepared baking sheet or pizza pan and unfold.

5 Place pork and veal mixture in the centre of the pie crust circle, spreading it out in an even layer and leaving a 10-cm (4-inch) uncovered border. Fold edges of crust up over filling, forming pleats and leaving a roughly 5- to 7.5-cm (2- to 3-inch) opening at the centre.

6 Bake pie for 25 to 30 minutes or until the crust is golden-brown on the top and bottom and completely cooked at the folds.

Rib sticking and hearty, this pea soup packs a nutritional punch, is full of fibre and comforting flavour. Just before serving, pop a few bagels into the toaster — they're a perfect accompaniment to the soup.

Preparation:

1 Place all soup ingredients in a very large saucepan. Cover and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer covered about 1 1/2 hours, stirring occasionally until peas are very tender. Discard bay leaves.

2 Meanwhile, preheat oven to 400F (200C). Slice bagels into 1/4 inch (4 cm) wedges, then cut again into 1/2-inch (1-cm) size croutons. Place in a bowl. While tossing bagel wedges, drizzle in

3 Remove about 2 cups (500 ml) soup and puree until smooth. Stir back into soup in pot. Soup should be thick, but thin with a little water or broth if you wish. Makes 8 cups (2 L) soup and 3

DON'T HANG YOURSELF OUT TO DRY

QUESTION:

I would like to eco-source dryer sheets. Do such things exist?

Matthew from Vancouver, BC

Dryer sheets were actually designed to reduce static in synthetic fabrics only. But today, most people add a sheet (or more) to every dryer load. Dryer sheets do not lend themselves to eco-friendliness because of their disposable nature and synthetic chemical ingredients. They're best avoided, so I'd suggest saving your money.

Since full disclosure of ingredients in consumer products like dryer sheets is not required by law, it's hard to know exactly which chemicals they contain. However, many people who stop using dryer sheets find they and others in their home also stop suffering from asthma-like symptoms, headaches or irritated skin. To prevent static cling, simply hang clothes to dry. To reduce static you can also add half a cup of white vinegar to the rinse cycle of your washing machine.

Dryer sheets and liquid fabric softeners contain chemicals that coat your laundry with a residue. Try to scrub your lint filter regularly if you use dryer sheets because they can leave a film on the filter. The synthetic perfumes derived from petroleum-based ingredients are another concern. Once the scented air leaves your dryer vent and floats into your neighbourhood, it's causing allergic reactions in others. That's not very neighbourly.

Tree-planting: Leave it for fall

► Now's a great time to plant trees, with a little homework ► Check your arborist's references, certification or portfolio when you consult them

When Lynne and Kemper Smith moved to Golden, Colo., from Florida six years ago, they bought a new house and planted trees — fruit trees out back and a cache of aspen near the front door.

Very Colorado, those aspen. Unfortunately, it was the wrong part of Colorado. "I was a Florida boy and didn't know what I was doing," Kemper Smith says. "I didn't know they'd get this big."

Planting the wrong tree in the wrong place is common, according to arborists around the country. Homebuilders and homeowners often plant trees too close to houses, power lines or roads because they don't consider how the trees will look 20 or 30 years down the road. They choose trees that aren't necessarily suited to the soil and region.

Short-term esthetics win out over longer-term attractiveness and care.

"I think that a lot of it is lack of education," says Jon Elliott, an arborist for Denver-area Swingle Lawn, Tree & Landscape Care.

Fall is a good time for planting trees and shrubs, but homeowners need to do their homework. Lynne Smith says the little trees she and her neighbours planted already have grown too big.

Avoid the big-box stores for buying trees, which may not be hardy to the local climate, Elliott says. He recommends shopping at a reputable local nursery — and making sure their stock is grown in your climate zone.

Experts also recommend plants native to a region. For example, while the Smiths' aspens do grow well in the Colorado mountains, they become susceptible to fungus, disease and insect infestation at lower altitudes, including Golden. The river birch, which looks similar, is the better suburban yard tree there, says Elliott.

Steer clear of office gossip

► Maintain integrity and diversify your friendships ► Petty politics, cliques can transform a workplace

DREW HINSHAW
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

Office gossip can buzz back to the wrong ears and sting like a bee.

Which is why it's better, career counselors advise, to float like a butterfly above the cubicle cliques and petty politics that transform even the most professional bureau into a snake pit.

"In some environments, the office can really be like high school," career coach Pamela Skillings notes. "There are all these cliques, and people who are favoured at one time. Who you're hanging out with can be perceived as taking sides."

If your colleagues have you typecast as an office mean girl or a card-carrying Boys Club lackey, it's likely because you've over idolized the catty friendships you've formed.

"You need to get away from that, even if you think you're working with the coolest people in the universe," Skillings adds.

"Diversify your friendships," concurs workplace relationship expert Courtney Anderson.

That means extending a lunch invite to the shy paper shufflers and fixed-place cubicle-statues who rarely say "yes." It could mean dropping by a department you don't normally graze, or bringing pizza to the interns.

For the truly self-unaware, achieving non-alignment in the office realpolitik could also require keeping a paper tally of the number of critical and backbiting comments you let slip past the filter.

"We usually can't see how bad it is, and we need to get empirical data," she says.

ta," she says. "Once we have that moment of truth where we fact that data, oftentimes, it's shocking."

Some of the unhappiest moments between colleagues come during happy hour.

Over half-off pints of froth — or while rocking around Christmas trees and jack-o-lanterns of holiday parties — coworkers are all too likely to give their verbal inhibitions the night off, Anderson says.

Small business owners happy despite long hours

Owning a small business may offer more freedom to make decisions, but it can also mean working long hours.

According to the TD Small Business Happiness Index which examined the attitudes and behaviours of small business owners in a dozen North American urban centres, the majority of Canadian small business owners work 50 or more hours each week, with 19 per cent working 50-59 hours and 38 per cent saying they work 60 hours or more.

"Despite often 'burning the midnight oil,' small business owners are happy people," says Alec Morley, senior vice-president at TD Canada Trust.

Only 12 per cent of small business owners are working less than they anticipated.

McDONALD'S VISIT BEHIND JUNK SUCCESS

A moment of brilliance can happen anywhere. Brian Scudamore found his inspiration while in the drive-thru lane at McDonald's.

Waiting for his lunch, he saw an old junk truck pass by his car. "There's my ticket," he thought, "I'm going to offer to haul people's junk away."

The first year The Rubbish Boys turned a modest profit but Brian had bigger plans.

He formed a board of advisors and came up with a new name, logo, brand and image. Scudamore was about to move into a new era of doing business.

America and Australia. Scudamore believes in the adage "work hard, work smart" but he admits that it hasn't always been easy.

He says there were days when he was in a cash flow crisis, he couldn't meet payroll and had to let good friends go.

"You have to make tough decisions. Leaders have to do what's best for the entire company and for your people."

He's also a firm believer in visualization. "If you believe in your heart and your head that you can make it happen and never let your idea go, it will happen. It sounds simple, but it's true."

So what's Brian's next goal? He wants to build a second brand with the goal of reaching $100 million in revenue within five years.

Court sides with students in Facebook case

SOCIAL MEDIA An Alberta Court of Queen's Bench judge has ruled that the University of Calgary infringed upon the charter rights of identical twin brothers when it sanctioned them for non-academic misconduct for criticizing their professor on a Facebook page more than two years ago.

Keith and Steven Pridgen were placed on probation in 2008 for comments made starting in November 2007 on a Facebook page titled "I no longer fear Hell, I took a course with Aruna Mitra."

The judge rejected the university's argument that defamatory statements made by a student about a faculty member must necessarily constitute non-academic misconduct.

Reward outweighs risk for small businesses

JON TATTRIE
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

A new survey suggests Canadian small business owners have suffered a decline in optimism about their financial prospects, but are still having fun running their own company.

The American Express Small Business Services' quarterly survey showed the overall index dropped two points to 64 per cent, indicating owners are more stressed about the state of the economy and less hopeful about their business prospects than they were in May.

Eric Nielsen, vice-president of small business services, said that while it wasn't a huge drop, it was the first downgrade since the survey started in the depth of the recession in March 2009.

The good news, he said, is that more than half of businesses polled felt things were stable or improving and 76 per cent are confident business will improve in the next six months.

"There is a bit more uncertainty," he said. "Small business owners are extremely close to their consumer. If the consumer experiences a pause, the owner is usually the first to see it."

Overall, stress levels were up six per cent. Forty-two per cent of owners planned to work past the age of 65 and 70 per cent of those who planned to retire intend to keep a role in the business.

"We've dubbed this a 'so-called' retirement," Nielsen said. Prolonged careers were partly a reflection of financial circumstances, with owners building RRSPs and counting on selling their business or keeping a salary to fund retirement. The post-retirement work was also a reflection of the fact that most business owners value their work and don't want to stop.

"They're having fun doing what they're doing," Nielsen says. "Even through the depths of the recession, three out of four believe that the rewards and opportunities outweigh the risk."

Many see the flexible take on retirement as part of the trade off of running their own business, the survey found.

Is ownership for you?

The TD Small Business Happiness Index asked small business owners in urban centres across North America for the top advantages and disadvantages of owning a small business. Here is what they said:

Top five advantages:

1. Being your own boss
2. Making your own decisions, being in control
3. Setting your own schedule
4. Making more money and having control over money
5. Having freedom and the ability to do what you want

Top five disadvantages:

1. Financing, cash flow, budgets and managing payroll

2. The responsibility, stress and risk

3. Difficulty managing, recruiting and retaining staff

4. Working longer hours and having limited time off

5. Dealing with government regulations

"Small business owners tell us that owning a business has many advantages, despite the day-to-day challenges that come with running a company like red tape, property taxes and attracting and retaining talent," says Alec Morley, senior vice president of small business banking at TD Canada Trust. NEWS CANADA

Online sites let students grade their professors

► Universities say exterior evaluations have no weight when reviewing faculty and factoring promotions

Michael Hirsh still remembers his worst university professor.

"The guy rambled, didn't give an outline or explain how he graded, didn't explain expectations. I got C," said Hirsh, who's in his last year as an economics student at a Toronto-area university.

"It messed up my GPA. A professor can make or break a course," he explained.

"Sure we gave the university our evaluations, but I wanted to warn other students."

Hirsh decided to take his "scathing" comments to ratemyprofessors.com where evaluations are available to anyone, not just university administration.

Official student evaluations have been part of the student experience for decades, but until the advent of the Internet, students had to rely on friends for professor recommendations — and gossip. Almost no universities provide their official evaluations to students.

At ratemyprofessors.com, the site boasts of having more than 6,000 schools with over one million evaluations. Other sites that have launched include Professorperformance.com.

The University of Toronto is one place where the administration is aware of the popularity of online evaluation sites and it's proposing its own online system, which is expected to go live in September 2011.

According to Prof. Edith Hillan, vice-provost of faculty and academic life at the university, sites such as ratemyprofessors.com are "useful for students, but we wouldn't use them from an institutional perspective to gather information."

"Often you'll get comments or scores at the extreme end of the spectrum," she said.

At Ryerson University, the vice-provost for faculty affairs, John Isbister, doesn't object to online evaluation sites, recognizing that they are useful for students who can't access the official evaluations that students give to the administration after a course is complete.

"We do care about student experience, but it's part of the faculty's collective agreement that their evaluations remain confidential," said Isbister.

Both universities say exterior online evaluations have no weight when the administration is reviewing their faculty and factoring promotions, tenure, salary and other related things.

The fact that official evaluations remain confidential is one reason for

Evaluations not for all students

Despite the popularity of sites such as ratemyprofessors.com, not everyone is a fan of online evaluations.

"I don't want to say something mean about my professor, I might be the only one who thinks that," said Tamara Milavic, a first-year student at the University of Toronto. Milavic also said that she knows which professors to avoid and which ones are recommended due to having an older sister who studied in the same department.

"I have enough people telling me what to do," she said.

Second-year U of T science student Katie Spizarsky had her own reasons for never doing any evaluations, whether through the university or online.

"Friends are more reliable," she said.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

students flocking to the online sites as an alternative.

"The official evaluations are hugely ineffective — they are good for the university to decide on salaries, but not good at helping us decide what courses to take," said Ben White, a third-year engineering student at the University of Toronto.

"I mean I never see them."

Also they can be beneficial for students who are either new or not connected to the university community.

"They are really helpful and useful — I came here not knowing anyone," said Yael Sperkut, a first-year humanities student at U of T.

"I used it in high school — with ratemyteachers.com — and when I was mad or thought they weren't doing their jobs, sure I posted — a lot."

Hillan said the University of Toronto's proposed online evaluations will have "provostial guidelines" — to oversee the system to make sure it's used appropriately.

These proposed evaluations don't do enough for White.

"Even the ones done through the student union are slightly edited if they're too profane. I'm getting the straight truth when I go online," he said.

A tough time to be gay

► Evidence suggests middle school especially hard on gay youth, with bullying, intolerance at their peaks

By the time she was in eighth grade, Rory Mann was so aware of the differences between her and other students that she couldn't bear to enter the cafeteria. Instead, she ate lunch alone on the cold, hard bathroom floor, propped against a wall.

Sometimes Mann, who had known she was gay for about a year but dared not tell anyone, would cut herself on the arms with a razor blade. Her long sleeves hid the evidence of her misery from classmates and family.

"Everyone's trying to figure out who they are in middle school," says Mann, now 18 and a high-school senior in Newport, R.I. "They turn into vicious people. They are really insecure, and they exploit someone else's differences so people won't see who THEY are."

With recent stories of anti-gay bullying and tragic suicides of gay youth at the forefront of the national conversation, experts say they are increasingly seeing evidence that middle school is the toughest time for gay youth — a time of intense self-discovery, but also one when bullying and intolerance peak.

Evidence collected over the past few years indicates it's at this age — 11 to 13 or 14 — when many youngsters realize they are gay and consider coming out. Some take the plunge, and some don't. Yet it's a difficult time for such identity struggles because it's an age when being different feels the most painful.

"We know that kids are much more likely to be cruel-hearted then," says Michele Borba, an educational psychologist and frequent commentator on parenting issues. "They'll pick on anyone who is different. Peer pressure is huge. Kids desperately want to fit in and be included."

Indeed, the rates of violence against gay youth in middle school are almost twice as bad as in high school, says Eliza Byard, executive director of the Gay, Lesbian and Straight Education Network. She says 20 per cent of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender high-school students questioned in a 2007 school climate survey reported physical assault, while 39 per cent of LGBT middle schoolers reported the same.

And yet the answer is not to stay closeted, say Byard and others.

Her group's 2009 study found that coming out, while obviously making students a target for bullies, is also a hugely positive thing for gay students of any age — correlating with higher self-esteem, lower depression and a greater sense of belonging at school.

The problem, many say, is that middle schools are often woefully unprepared to combat the kind of harassment or bullying aimed at gay students, whether these students are out or not.

"Some teachers have mistakenly thought that if they address these issues in middle school that they're addressing sex, which would be inappropriate," says Carolyn Laub, executive director of the Gay-Straight Alliance Network, a San Francisco-based group that helps students form gay rights groups at their schools.

"People think, 'You can't talk about these issues in middle school.' But that is so far from the truth."

Schools often don't understand the early signs of that sort of harassment, Laub adds.

"I already had a girlfriend, a 'kid' girlfriend, but I felt uncomfortable at the thought of holding hands with her," he says. "I was trying to do the straight thing. It just wasn't working out."

It took a gay-themed teen novel, Geography Club, to bring things home to Baiseri. Even then, it took four more years before he came out. His middle-school years were particularly miserable.

"It was a really unhappy time. Middle school in gen-

Vikes overcome Favre's play in win

Percy Harvin's 95-yard kick-off return for a touchdown gave Minnesota a spark to start the second half, and the Vikings overcame another uneven game by Brett Favre in a 24-21 victory over the Dallas Cowboys yesterday.

Playing with a bad elbow and the NFL investigating alleged racy messages he sent to a former New York Jets employee, Favre took a bunch of big hits and finished 14-for-19 for 118 yards, one touchdown and one turnover.

Randy Moss's first home game since joining the Vikings in a trade turned into an afterthought, but the defence and special teams did plenty to make up for Favre's unpolished play.

The Vikings (2-3) won this matchup of pre-season NFC favourites, though even in defeat the Cowboys (1-4) could still wind up as contenders in the mediocre conference.

Tony Romo, who found Roy Williams for touchdowns twice in the first half, went 25-for-33 for 211 yards mostly on dump-offs and screens.

Big Ben theory: QB returns with a bang

- Coming back from suspension, Roethlisberger throws three TDs
- Steelers improve record to 4-1

STEELERS BROWNS

With Ben Roethlisberger revelling in the cheers he once feared he might not hear, the Pittsburgh Steelers looked like themselves for the first time all season. They also sounded like the team that loves to intimidate.

To the Cleveland Browns, it was Steelers linebacker James Harrison who was the game's impact player. Twice.

Roethlisberger, cheered loudly during his first game in nine and a half months, returned from his four-game suspension to throw three touchdown passes, and the Steelers (4-1) shut down a Browns offence that was depleted by Harrison hits during a 28-10 victory yesterday.

Roethlisberger finished 16-of-27 for 257 yards during his first regular-season game since he was accused of, but not charged with, sexually assaulting a Georgia college student in March.

Roethlisberger received numerous loud ovations from the standing-room crowd of 65,168.

"I started thinking about it on the way here," said Roethlisberger, who once worried that his reception would be chilly. "Before the game I got emotional. To hear the cheers was something special. I got a little emotional."

Branch keys Patriots victory

Deion Branch gave New England Patriots fans plenty of reasons to forget Randy Moss and the team's embarrassing playoff loss to the Baltimore Ravens.

Branch caught nine passes spearheading a 23-20 comeback win in overtime over the Ravens yesterday. The Patriots reacquired Branch last Monday from Seattle five days after trading Moss to Minnesota. Stephen Gostkowski's 35-yard field goal with 1:56 left in overtime gave the Patriots their eighth straight win after a bye week.

Sports in brief

Lions suffer injuries to Hill, Follett

NFL. Detroit Lions linebacker Zack Follett was hospitalized after a violent helmet-to-helmet hit with a Giants player while covering a fourth-quarter kickoff return.

The Lions said Follett was conscious and had full movement in his limbs.

He was set to stay in Hackensack University Medical Center last night for observation.

Detroit also lost starting quarterback Shaun Hill in the 28-20 loss to the New York Giants.

He broke his left arm late in the first half and spent part of the second half on the sideline with his arm in a sling.

Pressure-proven lefties set to take the spotlight

► Lee to face off against Pettitte in Game 3 of ALCS

► Time: Tonight, 8:05 p.m.
► Channel: Sportsnet

Cliff Lee and Andy Pettitte. The post-season ace against that of October pro.

With the best-of-seven AL championship series tied at one apiece, the scene shifts to Yankee Stadium for Game 3 tonight, when a pair of pressure-proven pitchers will be back in the spotlight.

Lee's left arm has been baseball's most dominant force in the past two post-seasons, carrying him to a 6-0 mark with a 1.44 earned-run average and three complete games in seven starts.

He'll be on the mound for the Texas Rangers against Pettitte, who has an outstanding October resume of his own. The long-time Yankees lefty is going for his 20th post-season win.

"Obviously, it's a great matchup," New York manager Joe Girardi said yesterday, when the Yankees and Rangers worked out under blue skies in the Bronx. "I think people are looking forward to tomorrow."

Coming off the first home playoff win in the franchise's 50-season history, the Rangers are back on the road — where they're unbeaten in these playoffs. Texas won all three first-round games at AL East champion Tampa Bay, including a pair of masterpieces by Lee.

Next, he'll try to join Orlando Hernandez and Orel Hershiser as the only pitchers to win their first seven post-season decisions. Hernandez opened 8-0 for the

At 19-9 with a 3.87 ERA, Pettitte holds major league records for wins, starts (41) and innings (256) in the post-season.

Yankees from 1998-2000, while Hershiser went 7-0 with the Los Angeles Dodgers and Cleveland Indians from 1985-95.

"I've got high expectations for myself. Regardless of what's happened in the past or what other people expect of me, I expect as much out of myself or more than anybody is going to expect of me," Lee said.

"So I don't look at it any different than I would any other game. I expect to be successful and that's the game tomorrow and every time I take the mound."

Tried, tested and true in the Bronx

Because of his overwhelming brilliance, most of the buzz leading up to tonight's matchup has revolved around Cliff Lee.

That's just fine with the 38-year-old Andy Pettitte, who is 5-0 with a 2.88 ERA in his last nine post-season starts and always seems to come through when New York needs him most.

After missing two months with a groin injury and making only three starts in September, he pitched seven solid innings to beat Minnesota in Game

2 of the division series.

"He's been through it so many times, does not become rattled, knows how to prepare for this type of game," Yankees manager Joe Girardi said of his pitcher.

Kleiza scores 23 as Raptors clobber Suns

PHOENIX

During the second half yesterday, the switch went on for the Toronto Raptors and the energy level went up.

They took control of the pre-season game and cruised to a 121-100 victory over the Phoenix Suns before a crowd of 12,902 at Air Canada Centre that lustily booed Suns forward Hedo Turkoglu, who put in an uninspired season with Toronto last year.

"Our guys had a lot more energy," Raptors head coach Jay Triano said. "Midway through the first half we found something and guys picked it up a little bit and started pressuring a little more."

The Raptors (3-3) had six players score in double figures led by 23 from Linas Kleiza followed by 17 each from Amir Johnson and Jarrett Jack. Sonny Weems added 16, Andrea Bargnani 15 and DeMar DeRozan 14 points for the Raptors, who trailed by 33-22 after the first quarter and 55-53 at the half.

Turkoglu, traded to Phoenix over the summer for Leandro Barbosa, had five points and five rebounds in 20 minutes and was booed each time he touched the ball.

Not a nice homecoming. "Home?" Turkoglu said. "I have never had a home like this. Wherever you go some people like you and some people don't. I wasn't paying attention to that. I just tried to go out there and play my game and try to do my best."

"I didn't get much love when I was here, too."

Sports in brief Rooney wants out of Man U: Reports

SOCCER. Wayne Rooney has reportedly told Manchester United that he wants to leave the Premier League club, although the club said speculation that the star striker will be sold in the January transfer window was "nonsense."

Several British newspapers reported on their websites that Rooney has fallen out with Man U manager Alex Ferguson since allegations surfaced about the player's private life last month.
